

Don't miss this special Your Rooms We Love issue from the editors of Dwell.

Order our special issue today.

dwell

Renovated exterior in Toronto

PHOTO

ORIGINALLY APPEARED IN INSPIRED BY AN ART PIECE, A COLLECTOR RENOVATES HIS TORONTO HOME ON MARCH 11, 2016

In Toronto, Canada, architect Anthony Provenzano renovated a home for a client that was inspired by the acquisition of a piece by artist Rirkrit Tiravanija. "It was a project that started when the clients acquired the other side of the semi-detached home they lived in," says Provenzano. "A decade passed after an initial 'connection' renovation and when the clients purchased an art piece by Rirkrit Tiravanija, we were contacted, as it precipitated a major architectural renovation at the rear of the house and a landscape intervention centered about the aforementioned art piece." The resulting renovation, shown above, was completed with an eye towards clarifying the structure's connection to the garden.

Don't miss this special Your Rooms We Love issue from the editors of Dwell.

Available on newsstands now, or click here to order online.

dwell

Renovated art collector's home in Toronto, Canada

PHOTO

ORIGINALLY APPEARED IN INSPIRED BY AN ART PIECE, A COLLECTOR RENOVATES HIS TORONTO HOME ON MARCH 11, 2016

A view of the home's rear facade, prior to the renovation and extensive landscaping updates, featured paneled windows and a darker palette.

Renovated art collector's home in Toronto, Canada

PHOTO

ORIGINALLY APPEARED IN INSPIRED BY AN ART PIECE, A COLLECTOR RENOVATES HIS TORONTO HOME ON MARCH 11, 2016

The home's newly renovated rear facade, which contains the kitchen and dining room, were aligned along the same axis as the backyard pool to create unified, linear sightlines across the property.

LIFE IS FULL OF Beautiful Moments
LET THEM IN

ENVISION YOUR
MARVIN HOME

MARVIN
WINDOWS AND DOORS
Built around you.

PHOTO

ORIGINALLY APPEARED IN INSPIRED BY AN ART PIECE, A COLLECTOR RENOVATES HIS TORONTO HOME ON MARCH 11, 2016

The home includes two exterior balconies, for which the garden-oriented sides have cantilevered glass guards to curtail any visual barriers to the garden. Taravaniya's sculptural, shed-like piece sits at the end of the pool.

Don't miss this special Your Rooms We Love issue from the editors of Dwell.

Order our special issue today.

dwell

Renovated art collector's home in Toronto, Canada

PHOTO

ORIGINALLY APPEARED IN INSPIRED BY AN ART PIECE, A COLLECTOR RENOVATES HIS TORONTO HOME ON MARCH 11, 2016

In the dining area, a single glass expanse provides a view to the backyard. "All of our efforts surrounding the glass are to make spaces have no visual barriers between inside and outside," says Provenzano.

Don't miss this special Your Rooms We Love issue from the editors of Dwell.

Available on newsstands now, or click here to order online.

dwell

Renovated art collector's home in Toronto, Canada

PHOTO

ORIGINALLY APPEARED IN INSPIRED BY AN ART PIECE, A COLLECTOR RENOVATES HIS TORONTO HOME ON MARCH 11, 2016

Provenzano says the mullion-less glass corners were sited to be as close to the outside perimeter as possible to provide an crystal-clear viewing experience.